Comics and manga have one thing in common: they cost lots of money, especially for a collector. Although anyone can enjoy the comics in the newspaper for a steal at a dollar or less, it might be a good idea to check out some webcomics, which are comics published on the internet by artists willing to share their work, mostly for non-profit. So, to save some money by using the internet for more than blogs and streaming videos, try reading a couple of these webcomics.

Cartoon Network shows, such as Dexter's Laboratory, Samurai Jack and Time Squad, just to name a few. Nickelodeon characters have also found their way into the comic. It's a story in progress that ties all of these characters together in one beautiful action-packed comic.

Nemu*Nemu (nemu-nemu.com) - G

Started in April 2006, this local comic by two talented artists captured many with an overdose of cuteness. The comic follows the lives of two girls named Anise and Kana. They come across two stuffed pups, Anpan and Nemu, that come to life!

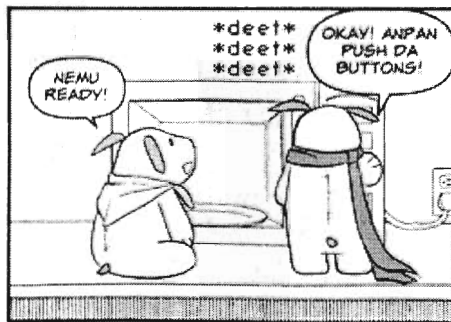

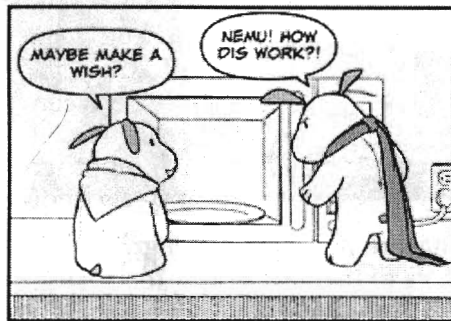

Powerpuff Girls Doujinshi (ppg.snafu-comics.com) - PG-13

This is a part of Snafu-Comics, a website that contains several well-drawn and colored comics. It's a fan-made story that includes the characters from many

Truenuff (truenuff.com) - PG-13

A comic about video games and college. The characters in Truenuff come off as really random and spontaneous. It also includes a loud and obnoxious guy in a bear suit and a gnome that wants to kill the cast. Truenuff is a must-read if one is interested in silly-looking art as well as some profanity and a storyline that follows no order at all.
